How Two Brothers Met.

There was a touching scene at the lunch counter in the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton station in Hamilton, O., a few nights ago about 10 o'clock.

Several trains pulled in at that hour, and two men rushed up to the lunch counter. The men were brothers, but they did not know it at the time. They had not seen each other for 20 years.

They were James and Charles Monroe, aged about 40 and 42 respectively, who a score of years ago lived near Springfield, Ills. They separated when young men, one finally settling at Grand Rapids, where he accumulated considerable wealth. The other went west and settled at Denver. As years wore on the brothers never heard from each other, and latterly each thought the other dead.

As they sat at the lunch counter, a friend of James called him, shouting, "Oh, Jim Monroe!" Before James could respond the gentleman sitting next to him turned, and giving him a close look said, "Are you James Monroe?" "Yes, sir," was the reply. "Who are you?" "I am your brother, Charles Monroe," replied the man.

The two men eyed each other in silence for several seconds; then there was an affectionate handshake, and tears glistened in the eyes of both.

Neither of them finished his lunch, but getting down off their stools they walked arm in arm about the station until the train left, and they went off together.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An Odd Missouri Law.

Missouri law is sometimes comical. I read a few days ago that a new statute had been passed by the Missouri legislature which makes it a penitentiary offense for a husband to desert his wife until he has lived with her for at least 10 years. I do not know the phraseology of the statute, but it is plainly and simply interpreted, it seems, by everybody who has read it, and it means that when you marry a woman in this state you marry her for 10 years, and when you have served your 10 years you can kiss her goodbye and go.

It is a sort of a tontine arrangement, I suppose. The lawmakers must have been married men with wives at home who wear the breeches or they wouldn't have taken such a practical view of matrimony and set a timeclock on the marriage contract. They probably argue that the men who live 10 years with some women are sufficiently punished for their folly, and are entitled to skip if they have survived the ordeal.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Playing Santa Claus.

Charles Keene's 8-year-old son Freddie had a peculiar experience that nearly cost him his life. Freddie had climbed to the roof of a 1-story building used for cooking and washing purposes at the rear of his father's home in West Street, walk, and spying the chimney, which was about as high as his head, thought it would be great sport to play Santa Claus, climb down the flue and, like the jolly little fat man in the story book, descend to the room below.

The youngster had proceeded about five feet when he discovered that the chimney was not large enough to allow his body to pass further. His struggles to climb back again only resulted in his becoming wedged firmly in the chimney. Workmen near by heard his cries for help and hastened to the youngster's assistance, but before he could be extricated the chimney had to be torn down.—Connecticut Cor. New York Times.

Here's a Chance.

A professional man of wide reputation, who resides at Parkersburg, W. Va., and is a great lover of aquatic sport, determined to surprise his friends here this spring by coming out with a new yacht, and as a recreation and to make the surprise more complete concluded to build the vessel himself from a model of his own. Being the owner of a large house he went to a workshop, after which, having procured the necessary timber, he spent the entire winter at work on the boat.

He turned out a trim looking craft, about 80 feet long by 9 feet beam, manufactured his sails and got her all ready to launch when the idea dawned on him that he had made no arrangements to get it out of the building. Any one that can suggest a plan to get her out without tearing out the front or back or taking off the roof of the house can get the boat at a low price.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Prices of a Stock During a Wall Street Panic.

Some idea of the character of Friday morning's speculation may be gleaned from this incident: A well known broker had an order to sell 500 shares of General Electric. When the order was sent to him, the price had already fallen from 80 to 70. By the time he reached the trading post the stock had sold at 58, and he offered his stock at the price without eliciting any higher bid than 58. Unwilling to sell at such a sacrifice he determined to wait a little and turned to execute an order in another stock in an adjacent "crowd." Returning almost directly to the General Electric post, he heard somebody bidding "nine for a hundred." He disposed of his 500 shares at "nine" and was astonished to learn that he was selling them at 40 instead, as he supposed, at 58, and the stock kept on jumping until it crossed 80.—New York Herald.

The President's Summer Home.

"Belvoir," the house in the suburbs of the national capital which President Cleveland has leased for his summer home, has an interesting history. General Winfield Scott selected the place as the site for the soldiers' home, but it was not secured, as no agreement could be arrived at with the owner. Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star Spangled Banner," spent many years of his early life at "Belvoir," and Presidents Van Buren, Tyler and Buchanan each spent several seasons there. Baron Gerault, the German minister at Washington about the time of the Mexican war, also made "Belvoir" his summer residence.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Don't You Know that you can secure almost immediate relief from indigestion, and that uncomfortable fullness after meals, by simply taking a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator? Some people think that because it is called Liver Regulator it has nothing to do with indigestion and the like. It is the inaction of the Liver that causes indigestion, and that fullness; also Constipation, and those Bilious Headaches. Millions have been made to understand this and have been cured from these troubles by Simmons Liver Regulator—a medicine unailing and purely vegetable.

From Rev. M. B. Wharton, Baltimore, Md. "It affords me pleasure to add my testimony to the great virtues of Simmons Liver Regulator. I have had experience with it, as occasion demanded, for many years, and regard it as the greatest medicine of the times. So good a medicine deserves universal commendation."

THURMAN FOR SILVER.

Plain Words in Behalf of the White Metal—He Denounces State Wildcat Currency and Upholds Free Coinage.

Hon. A. W. Thurman, son of the dead Ohio statesman, Hon. Allen G. Thurman, who is known to have been for years an uncompromising advocate of free coinage, was interviewed by the State Journal at his home in Ohio and asked if he did not now believe that the absolute repeal of the Sherman law would again restore confidence and business prosperity. In reply he said: "The first result of the absolute repeal of the Sherman law may be for a short time to again fool the business men of the country by making them think they will have better times. Six months, however, will dispel their delusion. This depression in business, you know, has existed, with but one or two interruptions for the last twenty years. At one or two periods during this time we have had what is called a boom and all hoped the good times would continue, but alas, never yet have these hopes been realized, for in a short time prices again began to decline. There is a striking fact, too, in connection with these little booms, as I may call them, which is that each time they occur they do so at more distant periods, continue for a shorter time than the one preceding, and the decline, when it comes, falls to a point below that which it has ever reached before. During 1892 we saw one of these years of better times. Certainly the indications are that we are now fast following the same beaten path, for prices have in nearly all lines reached a lower level than ever before."

"Why has this been so?"

"GOLD THE CAUSE."

"Business men are continually asking each other that question. And in their ignorance attribute it to almost every cause but the right one. Over-production caused by improved machinery (therefore the world should adhere to old tools), competition, and now, parrot-like, they are repeating the reasons given by those who say that gold alone should be the standard; that it is the loss of confidence caused by the Sherman law and the use of a 'dishonest dollar.' If they will stop and thoroughly investigate they will find that the true reason is because this single standard gold by which they are now compelled by governments to measure all the commodities which they produce and in which they deal, has been month after month and year after year appreciating in value, and as long as this continues he who buys to sell in the future or enters into any kind of industrial pursuit which takes time to develop, I care not what diligence, what energy, what skill, what forethought he employs he will not be rewarded for his labor as he should be, if in the end he is repaid at all."

"What industrial enterprises need more than anything else in the world is stability in the measure, what is called the standard of value. Business men seem to think that this can only vary one way, that is depreciate. They must learn that there is ten times more danger to them when it is appreciating. Silver, upon which they now blame everything, is not the standard by which they are compelled to measure their products, but gold. Why not then examine carefully concerning it before jumping to conclusions? If they do they will find that in all the countries where gold has been used as the single standard that there has been a continual shrinkage in the value of all products ever since 1873. If improved methods, causing over production, caused this, it is a strange fact that the beginning occurred simultaneously with the demonetization of silver and has continued ever since. There were continual improvements being made in all methods of production prior to 1873, yet prices did not steadily decline, but on the contrary steadily advanced. How could the same cause produce exactly opposite results?"

"You object then to low prices?"

"A STEADY DECLINE."

"No, it is not low prices to which the silver men object, but as Prof. Andrews said at the Brussels conference, it is the 'continual, continual fall that is the accursed thing.' There seems to be no bottom, and when is the fall to cease? The gold newspapers have been for years telling producers that they would soon realize better prices, and these same producers, in face of the fact that they seen each year further decline, seem to have believed them. Why they haven't learned in all this time that industrial enterprises cannot be carried on upon a continually falling market without the destruction of all profits and therefore a general winding up in bankruptcy, I do not understand. It always has been so, and unless these gold men can change natural laws by acts of congress it always will be so."

"What was your banking scheme?"

"WANTS TO USE SILVER."

"It was to use silver dollars for a basis, but the moneyed interests will never agree to that unless they are forced to by the people. No, after they succeed in repealing the Sherman law the cry will soon resound throughout the land for the government to issue bonds, to borrow, that the people may be made to pay in a particular coin in which they never promised to pay. Then more national bank notes issued on these bonds. Then in a year or so when the pressure begins to be felt again there will be a demand for the payment of the now outstanding greenbacks in a long-time bond. Then more promises to pay, based upon these other promises to pay, so we may have a sound and stable currency." The moneyed interests of the world never objected to furnishing the people with their notes for a circulating medium and they never will. They will make the people believe that these notes are better than gold, and then Governor Allen's famous saying, 'Specie payments are a damned barren ideal,' will be realized."

"You then object to national banks?"

"No, I do not. So far it is the best system of banking we ever had. I would much prefer, though, to have them issue their notes on real money gold and silver, than on government bonds. I am simply a hard money man against paper money based on nothing. State banks! Oh, they would simply be an abomination in the sight of the Lord."

"Do you think, by the repeal of the Sherman law, that we could force England into an international agreement?"

"I haven't any faith in an international agreement being brought about for years to come, and I believe, too, that the United States is big enough and strong enough to settle this question by herself, if we only had the courage to do it. It is true that the repeal of the Sherman act would make England suffer tremendously, but we would suffer also, a thing which, if possible, we want to avoid; and if congress would repeal our accursed navigation laws: let Americans buy ships wherever they can buy them the cheapest; make tariff duties on all the products of silver-using countries as low as possible, at the same time receive their silver at the old ratio, and will have entered the course that will bring not only England to her knees (examine how she has already suffered by India's inroads into her commerce of the East), but prosperity to this country for years to come."

The new comet discovered by Professor Swift is visible to the naked eye in the northwest part of the heavens. The astronomers say it is in the constellation Lyra, in which there are no stars greater than the fourth magnitude, and the adjacent constellations are made up of small stars, so that no pointers can be given to locate it readily. It is visible low down in the northwest heavens soon after sunset.

The census reports of the several county school superintendents compiled by State Superintendent Anderson show that there are 302,474 children between five and seventeen years of age in California, of whom there are 65,817 in San Francisco, 27,492 in Los Angeles, 27,270 in Alameda, and 12,945 in Santa Clara. The children in the other counties range from 112 in Alpine to 7,762 in Sacramento.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

A Handsome Thing for the Old Parties to Do.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—Would it not be a handsome thing for the remnants of the Republican and Democratic parties in Nevada to meet in separate conventions or conjointly and pass resolutions protesting against the repeal of the Sherman silver law and in favor of free coinage, and thus show the world that the honest people of Nevada are a unit on the silver question, notwithstanding the old party politicians think more of office than of silver? The true friends of silver, as an independent organization, will take such action next Saturday. Why not make the thing unanimous by the old parties falling in line? FREE COINAGE.

An Anecdote of Artemus Ward.

Artemus Ward's companions were a band of brilliant young Bohemians for whose kind the metropolis now contains no room. They were the last of their kind, and most of them lived but brief lives. They produced much that was brilliant, but nothing that lasted. Artemus alone won enduring fame. The others were writers, actors and minstrels. The brothers Dan and Neil Bryant were eminent members of the clan, together with Charles Dawson Shanley and a shining cluster of young men about town. One of the latter, who lived to become a staid merchant, used to relate with glee how on leaving the little theater in Twenty-third street late one evening in company with Artemus, Shanley and Neil Bryant the trio broke out in joyous carol.

The song was interrupted by one of the then despised metropolitan policemen, who roughly ordered them to stop the noise. At this rude interruption Artemus stopped his song, and turning toward the policeman, he said to him, "The astonished policeman and gave way to a gush of passionate tears. His friends endeavored to calm him, and the embarrassed officer, half choked by his warm embrace, begged him to desist, which he did with the declaration that "the metropolitan policeman is the noblest work of God." This sentiment secured escape and a continuance of the song.—Don C. Seitz in Century.

Cremation and Disease.
In the efforts to prevent the spread of infectious diseases there is no drawback so difficult to overcome as the burial of the dead in the ground. The microbes of disease are very tenacious of life, and they will remain with the dead for a period of 100 years. The microbes may die, but their spores or seeds have the vitality to live, and upon coming into favorable surroundings they will quickly develop. In digging up old burial places, scarlet fever, diphtheria, and smallpox have been let loose so that epidemics followed. In Quebec a smallpox epidemic followed the digging up a cemetery where the people had been buried for over 100 years. Similarly in England a scarlet fever epidemic followed the removal of dead bodies from a country parish churchyard.

But occasionally epidemics seem to break out in the neighborhood of cemeteries without any apparent cause. In 1891, in a cemetery about 30 years ago that earthworms completely turned over the soil of every part of the earth in a given time, and now Pasteur comes out with positive proof that the earthworms bring up disease germs and microbes from dead bodies buried several feet below the surface. Those who die from infectious diseases are not only menaces to their friends while they are sick, but their dead bodies are constant dangers to the public health.—Yankee Blade.

Familiarity With Snakes.
Familiarity with the snake breeds toleration. He is a lawless sort of creature certainly, with too many vertebrae and no eyelids, but he is not always so horrible as he is imagined. A snake is rather a pleasant thing to handle than otherwise—warm, firm, dry, hard and smooth on the scales, rather like ivory to the touch. He is also a deal heavier than you expect. When for good behavior I have been admitted to Tyrrell's inner sanctum at the zoo and to the corridors behind the lairs, where hang castoff skins like stockings on a line, I have handled many of his pets. I have never got quite as far as rattlesnakes, because rattlesnakes have a blackguardly, wretched look that I don't approve. But there is a Robert island snake about 5 feet long with no poison who is very pleasant company.—Arthur Morrison in Strand Magazine.

How Lead Pencils Are Made.
Few people are aware of the difficulties that were surmounted in the manufacture of the common lead pencil. It is the first place the graphite of which it is made is rarely found sufficiently homogeneous to allow pencil lead to be cut from it, so it is always ground to powder and then pressed into blocks. The great difficulty was to press the blocks until the graphite was hard enough to use, and for many years every effort in this direction was defeated by the crumbly nature of the material. Finally a device was employed that exhausted the air, after which the blocks were again pressed, and when this was done the material was found to be as hard as when taken from the quarry. But thousands upon thousands of dollars were spent in experiments before the result was reached.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Delicate Compliment.
To be able to compliment without seeming to flatter is a rare gift, and probably no race of men are endowed with that gift more extensively than the French.

An example of the Frenchman's rare tact in matters of this sort is shown in that sweet little story of a man who had ventured to compliment a white haired old lady upon her beauty.
"Ah," said she, "I fear you flatter me. You call me pretty? Why, I am an old woman, my hair is white, and see, here is a wrinkle."
"A wrinkle?" he replied. "Never, madame; that is not a wrinkle. It is but a smile that has drifted from its moorings."—Harper's Young People.

Ghosts Are Very Old Too.
It has been the current opinion for centuries that places of burial are haunted especially after nightfall with specters, ghosts and other apparitions. Persons who have investigated this matter declare that the ghost idea was prevalent before Noah built the ark. Even Ovid has put himself on record as believing that spirits occasionally left their sepulchers and wandered about seeking whom they might devour.—St. Louis Republic.

"German Syrup"

G. Gloger, Druggist, Watertown, Wis. This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all the failures and successes, and can therefore judge: "I know of no medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boschee's German Syrup. Last winter a lady called Hoarseness, at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as a few doses had given her relief." *

Schoolmarm's Festered by Mice.

Innocent little mice have caused such a commotion among the lady teachers of the new Nevada school at Beilshelm that a strike is hinted at unless the directors go gunning for the pestiferous beasts. Although the building is new, a large number of mice frolic about on every floor, and the schoolmarms are in constant terror. Feminine eyes glance nervously about beneath desks, and nervous hands twitch close to the skirts to be ready for a retreat in case a bold mouse samps her way.

The boys, especially the boys, whose sense of humor is better developed than their veneration. Do not hesitate to snore the bothersome mice so they will run toward their teachers. The question is so grave the school board will take action. It is said, to abate what the pretty teachers say is "a horrid nuisance."—Philadelphia Record.

Perjury in England.

Confession is said to be good for the soul, and if such be the fact The Pall Mall Gazette and an English judge can take much comfort. They declare that perjury is becoming a fashionable vice in England. In trying a case at Birmingham Judge Chalmers, who has been a magistrate in India, says that as perjurers the false witnesses of Bengal, of whom dozens can be got for a sixpence, are not to be compared with their counterparts in England. In the case he was trying the cross-examining was so hard that no verdict could be given. The Gazette says it is humiliating, but the same vice prevails in London. "The honor of a politician, the honor of a wife—it made no difference; you can always hire some one to swear it away."—Exchange.

The Mania For Suicide.

Another woman who has the suicide habit has turned up in the person of Maggie Benner of New York. Seven times during the past year has she attempted to end her life, but all have been unsuccessful. The first time was in March, 1892, when she jumped into the East river and was rescued. Several weeks ago she drank carbolic acid, and on Tuesday night she attempted suicide again by drinking paregoric and carbolic acid. She has also been sent to the Bellevue hospital four times while suffering from alcoholism. Besides these futile attempts at death she has been arrested for stabbing a woman.

Chase the Gold Cure.

The city authorities at Lenora, Ia., have begun the enforcement of a new penalty for drunkenness. The city council passed an ordinance which required that any person arrested twice for drunkenness have his choice between reformation and hard labor. He must make up his mind to take either a course of treatment at a reformatory or gold institute or work on the streets of the city for 10 days with a ball and chain. The ordinance is now in force, but so far only one man has been twice arrested. He chase the gold cure.

Our Friend the Earl, Ye Know.

Through the death of the late Earl of Derby a blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter is at the disposal of Mr. Gladstone. The honor of wearing this badge is much sought after.
